6.1 DEFINING UNREASONABLE CUSTOMER CONDUCT

Council follows the NSW Ombudsman's Unreasonable Customer Conduct - Practice Manual. The NSW Ombudsman categorises Unreasonable Customer Conduct into five broad categories for the purpose of developing frameworks to manage the conduct. These categories are listed below.

6.1.1 Unreasonable persistence

Unreasonable persistence includes:

- instances where a person will not accept Council's decision on a matter and the person has exhausted all appropriate avenues of internal review or appeal;
- sending excessive amounts of correspondence, or making numerous phone calls and/or visits raising the same issue/s with different Council Officers or Councillors;
- circumstances where a person or group is sending / making continuous complaints on a wide range of issues which places unreasonable demands on Council resources.

6.1.2 Unreasonable demands

Unreasonable demands are any demands (expressed or implied) that are made by a person insisting on outcomes that are unattainable, moving the goal posts, or demanding to have their complaints dealt with in particular ways.

6.1.3 Unreasonable lack of cooperation

Unreasonable lack of cooperation is an unwillingness and/or inability by a person to cooperate with Council, Council Officers, or the complaints system and processes that result in a disproportionate and unreasonable use of Council Contact Methods, time and/or resources. This includes customers providing disorganised, excessive or irrelevant information, being unwilling to consider other valid viewpoints, or refusing to define their issues of complaint when they are capable of doing so.

6.1.4 Unreasonable arguments

Unreasonable arguments includes customers seeking cause and effect arguments where there are clearly none, holding conspiracy theories unsupported by evidence, and irrationally interpreting facts or laws and refusing to accept other more reasonable interpretations.

6.1.5 Unreasonable behaviour

Unreasonable behaviour is conduct that is unreasonable in all circumstances – regardless of how stressed, angry or frustrated a person may be – because it compromises the health, safety and security of others or the person himself / herself. This includes:-

- (a) Aggressive, Abusive or Offensive conduct such as extreme anger, aggressive, abusive, offensive or threatening behaviour, assault or violent conduct; or
- (b) harassing or predatory behaviour towards Councillors, Council Officers, Volunteers or other customers.

6.2 OPTIONS TO MANAGE UNREASONABLE CUSTOMER CONDUCT

Unreasonable Customer Conduct will generally be managed by limiting or adapting the ways that Council interact with and/or delivers services to customers who engage in Unreasonable Customer Conduct.

Council may adapt or restrict customer access to Council Contact Methods in some or all of the following ways depending on the circumstances:

1. Restrict who the customer has contact with
2. Limit what the customer can raise with Council
3. Restrict when the customer can have contact with Council
4. Limit the customer to writing only contact
5. Limit where the customer can make contact
6. Restrict contact through a representative only
7. Limit how the customer can make contact.

6.2.1 Applying and Monitoring Restrictions and Limitations

Where a decision has been made to apply a restriction or limitation on a customer's access to Council Contact Methods, the customer will be provided written notification of the decision and given an opportunity to request a review of the decision.

Where a decision is confirmed or a request for review is not received, the Decision Maker will monitor the customers contact with Council on an annual basis. The customer will be provided with an outcome of this monitoring and advised if the limitation/restriction is to continue, be amended or removed.
