Council directory freely promotes regional groups and services

Gladstone Regional Council's 2018-19 Community Services Directory is now available to the public.

Gladstone Region Mayor Matt Burnett said the directory was published by Council as a free community service.

"The directory is a popular community resource which annually enables not-for-profit groups, community and service sectors within the Gladstone Region to freely promote their organisations, clubs and groups," Councillor Burnett said.

"Hundreds of entries can be accessed in an easy-to-use format with contact details and general information provided.

"The well-used resource is useful to have providing a quick reference to Gladstone Region groups and services."

Booklets are available across the region from Council's administration centres, regional libraries, Rural Transaction Centres and the Community Advisory Service.

"The 156-page booklet lists contact details for a broad range of general community services, special interest, sporting and recreation groups, allied and community health and support services for all ages," Cr Burnett said.

"The directory can also be accessed online via Council's website and features improved search functions and links to Facebook and web pages.

"The electronic version of the directory is also user-friendly and suitable for viewing on tablet and mobile devices providing residents with the ability to access information at their fingertips."

Electronically, the directory can be accessed online at www.gladstonecommunitydirectory.com.au
